Hampton, VA "I recently attended a budget meeting at one of our local schools to have some input on the budget. There was quite a bit of information, but the attendance and the idea to be inclusive was great. I understand everyone is not going to be happy with the outcome, but I hope the responses help drive the decisions made." My name is _____ and I value "GETTING MY VOICE HEARD"

March 12 at 2:42pm · Report

Glenda Moore Sellers Like the first responder I also value having my voice heard. I have attended council meetings and I feel they are a great way to let the city leaders know what's on our minds. One of the services I find very valuable is 311. They are always friendly and eager to help me find the help I need. I also value having my trash, recyclables, and bulk items picked up regularly. I think Animal Control does a great job helping with strays and keeping dead animals picked up. Hopefully the budget ax will not fall on these services. Thank-you, Glenda A. Sellers

Racheal Brennan I appreciate those things Glenda mentioned being regularly picked up as well. But I also value law enforcement. Those guys (and gals) do what they need to do to ensure safety to the general public.

They are awesome!! Kudos to law enforcement in Hampton, and in the other parts of Hampton Roads

Tabby Sellers Well, I DON'T value the smog-infested streets of the over-packed city of Hampton. HPR is amazing and has quite interesting parks and exhibits, though.

Dave Rasbold I value a clean city. I was impressed when we first moved here in 1996. But since then I seen a degradation in our Hampton pride. This is our home, lets value pride in our home town again.

Tabby Sellers I DO NOT value how Hampton is continuously building condominiums that we cannot afford. It is allowing too many people to move into the city of Hampton; we have enough citizens as it is. I think that we should have some say in the decision-making of the city. Why don't the city council & other city staff make comments at the city council meetings? If we're saying something, you all need to respond at the appropriate time: when it is said.
